peoples of these islands and of the Commonwealth realms and territories throughout the world. In this purpose, I note that I should be upheld by the affection and loyalty of the peoples whose sovereign I have been called upon to be and that in the discharge of these duties."

Si è trattata della prima proclamazione da quando Elisabetta II è diventata regina nel 1952.

Al tempo c'era già la televisione, ma non venne permessa la trasmissione dell'evento perché vista come fuori luogo rispetto al suo sapore antico.

Per Carlo III invece tutto è stato filmato in diretta e trasmesso in tutto il mondo.

La proclamazione non lo ha reso re, dato che aveva acquisito il titolo nel momento in cui sua madre era spirata due giorni prima.

Ma si tratta di una tradizione che risale a centinaia di anni fa e che diffonde la notizia di un nuovo monarca in tutto l'impero, in tempi pre-televisione e internet.

Folla da tutta Londra si è materializzata per godersi e celebrare un momento storico che non si vedeva da 70 anni.

Il macchinista ferroviario Jim Russell era tra i membri del pubblico radunatisi per l'appuntamento con la storia.

"It's a once in a lifetime event I think, I always thought she'd live forever the Queen but we can't believe it, still in a state of shock to be honest with you".

peoples of these islands and of the Commonwealth realms and territories throughout the world. In this purpose, I note that I should be upheld by the affection and loyalty of the peoples whose sovereign I have been called upon to be and that in the discharge of these duties."

This is the first proclamation since Elizabeth the Second became Queen in 1952.

At the time, television was already around, but it was seen as out of line with the ancient flavour of the event, so no broadcasting was allowed.

For Charles the Third, however, everything was filmed live, and beamed across the world.

The proclamation doesn't make him King, he acquired the title the moment his mother passed away two days earlier.

But it's a tradition dating back hundreds of years, that spreads the word of the new monarch across the empire, in a time before television and internet.

Crowds across London came out to enjoy and celebrate the historical moment that hadn't been seen in 70 years.

Train driver Jim Russell was among those members of the public who came to witness history.

Proclamazioni simili avverranno in tutto il Regno Unito ed il Commonwealth, per diffondere la notizia dell'inizio del regno di Carlo III.	Similar proclamations will happen across the United Kingdom and the Commonwealth, to spread the word of the beginning of the reign of King Charles the Third.
